MUTUALS VS. WHITE STOCKINGS.

Special Dispatch to The Tribune.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The Chicago Club dropped their second game in the East to-day, after having won eight successive victories. Some people cannot bear prosperity. The struggle was a good one to look at, and was the occasion of the best play the Mutuals have shown this year. It was attended by nearly 2,000 people, and was satisfactorily presided over by Mr. Daniels, the best umpire in the East. No run-getting was done until the third inning, when Barnes led off with a good hit, but was afterwards touched off third by Hallinan on Hines' hit. The latter reached first on the play, and was sent along by McVey's clean hit. Peters coming to bat with two men out, hit a beauty between right and centre for three bases, while both runs came in. To offset this the Mutuals opened the fourth inning with Start, who gave White a chance and retired. Treacy then hit sharp to Anson, and the latter not only fumbled the ball, but made a fearful overthrow when he did get it, and let the runner to third. Hallinan settled the long hit question by a corker between Bielaski and Hines, on which he made home plate almost by the time the fielder reached the ball. To offset this, the Whites put in a run by successive safe hits by Spalding, Bielaski, and Barnes, in their half of the fourth inning. Again, in the seventh inning, they scored a single on called balls and a good hit by McVey. The best play of the game was in the eighth inning, when Mathews, coming first to bat, was given his base on an error by McVey, off Peters' throw. Nichols then took his base on balls, and nobody was out, when Holdsworth sent one up to Bielaski which was accepted. Start followed with a high fly which descended near second. Barnes squared himself under it and struck it down to the ground to where Peters was waiting. In a turn of the wrist the little man snatched it up and sent it to Anson, and he drove it back to second, making the finest double play of the season, by forcing out both Mathews and Nichols. The critical part of the game was in the ninth inning, when Holdsworth, Start, Treacy, and Hallinan followed each other with safe hits, earning a run and filling the bases. Start then came home on Craver's out, and the score was tied. Hicks popped one up for Spalding, and it looked as if no more would be made, when Booth hit a fly back of second. Hines, Glenn, Peters, and Barnes all ran for it, and between them all it dropped, and Treacy and Hallinan brought in the winning runs. The blame for the misplay belongs to Barnes, who could and should have caught the ball. This gave the Mutuals a lead of two runs, and, though the Whites pulled up the best they knew, they could only get one, and, consequently, were beaten by the following

It appears very clear from what has been said that there was a good deal of Barnes in to-day's game as well as in Tuesday's, only to-day it was on the other side. His error and Anson's were the only two that affected the Mutual score. The latter club can also congratulate themselves on their great good luck in getting four successive hits in the last inning, when they had gotten only the same number in the eight preceding innings. It is a commentary on the uncertainty of the noble game that the losing club should outbat and outfield the winners.
