THE NOTICEABLE POINT
In yesterday's game was, of course, the perfect fielding of the home nine, who played their second game of the year without an error. The greater part of the work fell to McVey, Barnes, and Peters, and whatever was dropped by the visitors was picked up in fine shape and handled at first to perfection. The honors of the game were, however, carried off by Hines, who put out six hauds by good catches. His judgment and capture of Jones' long hit in the eighth inning was as clever a piece of outfield play as has been shown this season. A running catch by Glenn was also worthy of notice. The quickest handling of the game was a double play made by Peters, Barnes, and McVey in the fifth inning. This same inning was also notable for putting out the visitors on the first five balls pitched,—something which has not happened on this ground before this year.

THE PLAY OF THE VISITORS
was much the best they have shown this year with the Chicago Club. Dean listened to wise counsel, and threw away his boyish freak of standing on his head and other like games, and his pitching was a great improvement accordingly. He was well supported by Foley, who has through his week's play shown much steadiness and pluck. Gould also showed a good form, and Booth at short was much better than at third. Clack, the tenth man, who was put in to fill Kessler's place, was evidently not cut out for a third-baseman. He is a fine outfielder, and should be kept in the suburbs and not played in the diamond.

CHICAGO VS. CINCINNATI.

The seventh game between the Chicago and Cincinnati Clubs, and the farewell contest of the home nine for three weeks, drew a much better crowd to the Twenty-third street grounds than was to have been expected when it is considered that six consecutive weeks' play has been served up to the Chicago admirers of the game, and that the contest yesterday was with the Club which occupies the position at the other end of the list from the Chicagos,—to put it mildly. Jones opened the game by striking out, and the side was easily whitewashed. Barnes, on taking position, seemed to show a wish for a fair foul, and all the Cincinnati fielders huddled around the foul line, and were consequently much scandalized at the conduct of Ross, who sent a long safe one between centre and left for two bases. To be sure, he reached third, but that was by the failure of Clack to hold the ball sent to him by Jones. After Peters had put up a fly to Sweasy, McVey showed what he intended to do by sending a very hard one smack against left-field fence, letting Barnes score while he went to second. He was, however, left there. The second inning showed a round O for both sides of the score-sheet, but in the third the visitors scored their first run, Foley being the lucky man. He led off with a safe one to right field, which got through the fence and into the seats while he took second. Snyder hit a hard one over third base, and let Foley reach third, whence he scored on Jones' very long fly splendidly taken by Hines. The best single play of the game was shown in this inning, when Anson collared Booth's sharp, high-line fly with one hand. The applause which greeted the sharp play of the Og of the nine was well deserved. The fourth inning also resulted in a double blank, the score standing 1 to 1 at the opening of the fifth inning, the fielding having been all along of the sharpest kind on both sides. In the visitors' half of the fifth, Dean led off with a safe one to left field, and secured second on Sweasy's out. After Foley had given Hines a chance, Snyder brought Dean home by a safe one to left, which was well handled by Glenn, but did not get to White quite in time. This made the score 2 to 1 in favor of the visitors, and gave the Whites something to work for. Their rally was one of the prettiest pieces of play of the year. Barnes was first man, but Dean knew too much to give him a chance at the ball, and so purposely gave him his base. The case was one which called for running, and Barnes accordingly lit out for second and reached it safely. Peters escorted a huge green log up to the plate, and when he had it fairly poised in air fell against the ball with such hearty good will that it went away out into the field, while Barnes came home. The fielder thought it possible to catch Barnes at home plate, and, when he threw for the purpose, Peters glided down to second. McVey hit just down in front of the plate, and was touched out by Foley, but Anson helped the fortunes of the side by a splendid hit to right field, which gave Peters a chance to score. White hit the first ball away to left field out of reach, and Hines filled the bases by a sharp one to Booth, which was muffed without grace. It was a beautiful place for a long hit, and Spalding improved it by cracking one over Pearson's head in right field, letting Anson and White score. The inning ended with the four runs, which put the Chicago score at 5, a more comforting view of the case. From this time to the end the visitors entirely failed to score, and went out in one-two-three order in three innings out of the four. Gould was the only exception to the rule, and he put in a single base hit in the last inning. The home nine, on the contrary, did not let up their batting till the close. They earned a run in the seventh inning by Hines' splendid left-field drive, aided by an out and Glenn's two-baser over Sweasy's head. McVey scored in the eighth inning off a fine fair-foul, aided by Anson's strong drive to right and White's out. The last inning gave two runs, made by Andrus and Barnes, aided by a couple of first-base outs, and McVey's second fair-foul and fourth clean hit
